At one time, things were so hot that Elizabeth Taylor was contacted about taking Kim's role opposite Laurence Harvey, but Liz said "no." Ireland isn't too far from England, but it's too far for Liz to be separted from Richard Burton.

A friend of mine writes from London that he dined near Liz and Richard recently at the Connaught Hotel, and he's never en two people so absorb each other. "They pay no attention to anyone near them or to their surroundings. They just never stop talking to each other long enough to notice anything." I still say Liz will marry Burton. She always gets her man.

Tommy Sands, who hates fly ing so much he'd prefer crawling across the country on his hands and knees to taking a plane, zoomed in via air Monday night to guest-star on the first 90-minute "Wagon Train" of the next season. This is Tommy's second "Wagon Train" within a monthbut when he was originally offered the 90-minute show, he turned it down. He had nightclub engagements in New York and in Boston and didn't want to have

FIVE PLACES AT DAYTONA...WHEN YOUR '63 FORD IS STILL GOING STRONG YEAR AFTER YEAR

Daytona's big, banked oval puts unbelievable stresses and strains on engines, steering gears and frames. The Fords that won at Daytona took all the punishment this famous track could dish out over 500 miles of grueling competition withput missing a beat.

In this toughest of all stock car events, mechanical failures claimed over fifty per cent of the starting field. But of twelve Fords entered, nine went the distance. Ford took six of the first ten places.

Five-hundred-mile events like Daytona are a public demonstration of toughness, reliability and sheer engineering excellence that are part of the new generation of Fords. A test like this can't be duplicated on anybody's testing grounds—it's run right out in the open. Any car can enter. But only the car that has the best total combination of strength, balance, precision

Balanced Report From The SEC

Disclosure by the Securities and Exchange Commission that "grave abuses" do occur in the public sale of securities comes as no great surprise. It's no secret that "boiler room" operators are still in business, and that some other selling practices may be on the borderline of

But the 1,600-page SEC report, which had been awaited by the financial community with some apprehension, was nonetheless reassuring. The picture presented by the report is, as the commission's chairman, William L. Cary, put it, "not one of fraudulent activity."

It was well to emphasize as the chairman did, that the report should not impair public confidence in the securities markets, but strengthen it as suggestions for raising standards are put into effect.

In fact, although the SEC asks Congress for legislation to correct certain abuses, Cary pointed out that neither the fundamental structure of the securities markets nor the pattern of existing regulations needs "dramatic reconstruction."

Nevertheless, the tremendous growth of the securities markets and increased public interest may make some updating of the regulatory system necessary. Certainly the rules should require more complete information, particularly on over-the-counter stocks.

These Days

A Tax Is A Tax Is A Tax

If you listen to the suspicions of a few realistic Senators-Richard Russell of Georgia is one exampleyou come away with the idea that fifty hungry State governors are just waiting to snap up any loose tax cut money which Congress may permit the American people to keep. And anything that the fifty governors may chance to overlook, the mayors of umpteen U.S. cities will be most happy to accept. The local wolves in City Hall and in the governors' mansions all have their tongues hanging out waiting for rejects from the Well, isn't that the way we high-minded partisans of states' rights and local initiative would have it? Here we have been preaching for years that the Federal government has been grabbing tax money that should be going directly to the grass-roots communities. By collecting taxes for themselves, we have argued, the localities would be sure to get the cash without having to relinquish a portion of it to support the Washington bureaucracy as it draws the dough in from the states and then passes a diminished part of it back in the form of federal aid to this and that.

The only practical trouble with looking at things this way is that the American people are tired of paying big taxes to anybody, period. Sure, the villages and the towns and the states have been starved by Washington for tax money sources. Sure, it would be better for education and urban renewal and four-lane throughways if the control of the same by fiscal means could be kept out of the hands of Washington and restored to the localities. But political theory to one side, it is just as much a wrench to the pocketbook when a mayor takes your money as when it goes to feed Mort Caplin's insatiable Internal Revenue Service suction

The truth would seem to be that when almost a third of the annual income of a people is being seized by governments of all types, it renders a man almost completely insensitive to nice distinctions in political philosophy. Is local control better than centralization? The answer to that one is what difference does it make when the guy wants to milk you dry. Does it matter what the hijacker's address is when he is clobbering you on the head?

Even now, the local locusts are busy anticipating any and all tax relief that Washington is-supposedlyready to grant. Indeed, the wails are loud in the land that what the federal government is prepared to yield is already going into other suction pumps.

In New York City, for example, it is as good as settled as I write these lines that there will be an increase in the local sales tax from three to four per cent. Moreover, a tax on commercial rent payers in New York is in the works.

I happened to be in the Empire State Building office of a prominent research outfit when news of the prospective commercial rent tax was released. The language of the research outfit's president included some epithets which I had never heard before. "You know what this tax means to us," he said in one of his less choleric interludes. "It means we shell out a hundred extra bucks a month. And what do I get for it? I might just as well transfer my business to Princeton, New Jersey, where I can live in nice surroundings." In another office on that same day I listened to the story of a foresighted man who had already moved his husiness premises to the New Jersey end of the George Washington Bridge.

So it goes when the local locusts take over from the federal locusts. But there is some balm in it. After all, there is dignity in knowing you have a choice between in-town and out-of-town shopping. And the research outfit can really move to Princeton when its Empire State Building lease is up.

Small balm, you may say, if you like to live where you are already established and if you like to shop where you have always shopped. The only selfrespecting action, when you come right down to it, is to declare war on the tax locusts everywhere. When you write to your Congressman to tell him to stop dreaming up nice projects for you, send a carbon copy of the letter to the governor. And another to the mayor. This will, of course, increase the fees to the post office. But when the post office bill gets too high we can always revive the Pony Express. It would take a new law to make it legal, but who knows what a maddened people might do?

'If You Wanna Play—Come Over Here'

Sen. McClellan Might Investigate Background Of Crown Empire

WASHINGTON - If it's true, as alleged in the Probate Court of Illinois, that a Chicago immigrant family put up the original cash for Henry Crown's Material Service Corporation, now merged with General Dynamics, this original investment of $4,250 would be worth millions today.

And it would be a more fascinating set of circumstances than the $6 billion TFX contract and the alleged influence used to obtain it, which Sen. John McClellan of Arkansas is now investigating. He might dig into this background of the Crown Empire too. Mrs. Dora Stern who is challenging Henry Crown in the Chicago courts for 21-1/4 per cent of the original shares of Material Service, is over seventy and so thin that a strong gust of wind might almost blow her into Lake Michigan. She contends that she and her mother, a Latvian immigrant, helped to get Henry Crown started.

Crown, who owns the Empire State Building, the largest slice of stock in the Rock Island Railroad, also in General Dynamics and the second largest slice of the Hilton Hotel chain, is likewise the son of Latvian immigrants. He is charming, self-assured, rides in a chauffeured limousine to his suburban home outside Chicago.

But on the subject of Mrs.

tomorrow, the record of the United States, so far as altruistic purpose is concerned, would outshine what any other nation has ever attempted. Some estimates have been published which indicate that about 100 billion dollars, or virtually one-third of the national debt of the United States, has been spent on aid to the rest of the world from America. This omic and technical projects, both loans and grants-money, materials, supplies and personnel.

But the question today is what to do about financing all this for the future. President Kennedy tactfully appointed a special commission to make a study and a report. He knew that nothing was to be gained by defending everything that has been done and that far more support would be obtained in Congress and among the American people if the government's policies were based on needed reforms and corrections.

But even so comprehensive a report as was recently submitted by the committee headed by General Lucius Clay does not come to grips with the problem of how to deal with this relatively new and baffling challenge in world history. Nor did the Secretary of State, Dean Rusk, by his lengthy and earnest statement to the House Foreign Affairs Committee last week, meet the real issue. It is this: Should the United States do the job virtually alone?

Stated briefly, a major question is not how much the United States can give away each year but whether the strategy behind the giving is well conceived and whether it is an attempt to do too much with too little. Also, it may be questioned whether all sections complish their aims. Secretary Rusk oversimplifies the argument by pointing to the areas in the world where America's financial assistance has had fruitful results in the sense that Communist influence has been diminished. He made a serious mistake, however, in the following comment in testimony before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs:

The cry that if billions aren't spent, "the Communists will take over" has a hollow sound today. The impression is conveyed that the United States is buying friendship with dollars not only in the Americas but throughout the world. The feeling prevails in the underdeveloped countries that if the United States doesn't furnish money, the Rusisans will. One side is played off against the other.

The United States, by its projects, cannot change the habits of human nature and produce intelligent leaders and Democratic institutions merely by supplying funds or by the work of thousands of boys and girls in the Peace Corps. Missionaries from many countries have for decades been helpful in the slow process of bringing civilization to lands where savagery has prevailed. It isn't a "foreign aid" task for the United States alone. The United States may have to assume military leadership in providing missiles and other weapons for defense of the free world, but the American people do not have the sole duty or obligation in the realm of world philanthropy.

The Communist impetus to the "liberation" and "independence" movements have been effective in Africa and Southeast Asia only because no over-all plan of "foreign aid," coincident with the gradual withdrawal of European 'colonialism," was launched.

The "foreign aid" problem is not just a contest with the Soviet government. It is a project for all of the free nations together, and the sooner some common sense is applied to the organization of the whole project on a multination basis, the quicker will the various countries in the underdeveloped category be started on the road to real progress without the rivalries and blackmail and extortion that characterize so many of the "foreign aid" pro-

"That's true," said Crown. "He was a friend of Si Griever's, her brother. But the stock of Material Service went on sale in 1938. She had plenty of time to claim it. But she didn't until 1959, twentyone years later.

He explained that Mrs. Stern's husband and her brother Si Griever had signed the incorporation papers for the company. "It was necessary to have someone do this," Crown said. "But this lady had nothing to do with it and put up no money.

Mrs. Stern's explanation for the long delay is that her mother could neither read nor write and spoke English only brokenly. Therefore neither her mother nor Mrs. Stern herself, most of her life employed in a department store, knew anything about fi-

"We then got a lawyer," continued Mrs. Stern, "who wrote to Henry, sending him photostat copies of the stock registration. He got an abrupt reply that there were no shares and I would never get my money."

Court Battle Continues

Mrs. Stern has now retained as her attorney Nat Kahn, a crusader for the underdog and a product of Jane Adams' Hull House. He points to the Illinois law which in January 1919, when Material Service was incorporated, did not require a third original subscriber. Therefore, when Henry and his brother Sol Crown, came to the Griever's home to incorporate, Kahn argues, it was not to get witnesses for the incorporation papers, but to get Mrs. Griever's carefully saved cash to finance a venture which has now become one of the most successful in the

There is clear evidence that the incorporation of the firm which later was to handle the building materials for most of the City of Chicago were signed in the home of an immigrant family on Division Street fo which the widowed mother could not speak English.

And there is no argument that the Crown and Griever families were extremely close in those days of World War I when there was no barrier of wealth between

Mrs. Stern lost her case before Judge Thomas E. Klucazynski in the Probate Court and has now appealed to the appelate court, first division. Her case is due to be heard by a three man panel sometime this year.

He might have made much money as a doctor, a lawyer, or an engineer. He chose instead to join Phi Delta Theta, which was founded in 1848, and has 85,000 members in 124 colleges. He is aware that he will never become rich at this work, but he is happiest finding jobs for PDT graduates, and finding new ways of being of service to 85,000 men who live in every county in the country.

The Millers bought a nice house, complete with mortgage, in Oxford, Ohio, which is the seat of Miami University and the founding college of the fraternity. "He's not a loud talker," Jerri was saying to the tall blonde, "but Bob gets things done. If he wants to get a big fish sitting out there in the back, he'll say he won't, and then he'll catch it."

"You can fish a whole lifetime," the Gray One was saying, "and never catch a marlin and never even see one." grinned. "I'll be happy to get my bait back," he said. Cuba watched the approaching shore and decided to make his turn to port. He was halfway in it when the clothespin snapped and Miller's line sang out in a rising whine. The Gray One jumped out of his fighting chair. Cuba tumbled down a ladder. The women gaped, then ran aft.

"Easy mon, easy," Cuba said. "He's heavy and strong. Put more drag on. Tire him. Let him ron." Far aft, the sea suddenly split and out of the white foam a giant fish made his twisting leap, and fell back into the Cuba stared, transfixed. Then he jumped off the deck. 'Marlin, mon!" he screamed. "Blue marlin. He big wan."

Miller fought quietly, as he always does. He put his back and his arms into it and the marlin swordfish sounded and surfaced. In a half hour, he had been gaffed. The fish was too big to bring aboard, so he was lassoed and tied athwart the stern. He measured 10 feet 11 inches. That evening, Bob Miller was a

Viral, Chemical Origins Of Cancer Studied

It is possible to produce tumors in laboratory animals that corrspond to human cancers. Research was hampered in the past because most of the skin cancers induced in animals experimentally were not seen too often in man. The newcomers include carcinoma of the lung, stomach, pharynx, mouth cavity, tongue, kidneys, and bladder.

We need tumors like these to test the hundreds of drugs that might be useful in the treatment is the ability to detect carcinogenic agents that are responsible. This is vital because prevention is one of the best weapons against this disease. Eliminate the causes and the problem will be solved. But it takes time to produce many of these malignancies in laboratory animals. The continuous inhalation of beryllium sulfate produces lung cancer in rats of cancer. Even more important but the rodents must be exposed

Savage's Pinch Single In Ninth Wins For Bucs

Face Gets Decision In Relief; Burgess And Bailey Homer

PITTSBURGH (UPI) - Ted Savage's pinch single with two out in the ninth inning Tuesday scored Bill Virdon with a run that gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Braves in a home opener.

The hit came off reliever and loser Bob Hendley. The winning run was set up when bonus baby Bob Bailey, who clouted his first major league homer in the seventh inning, singled Virdon to third base. Savage, obtained from the Philadelphia Phils in a winter trade for Don Hoak, then batted for winning pitcher Elroy Face.

The Braves had tied the score at 2-all in the ninth inning and chased starter Bob Friend, Hank Aaron led off by beating out a slow roller to short and Eddie Mathews singled to center. Bob Veale relieved Friend and Mack Jones greeted him with a runscoring double.

Realty Ramblings . . .

For the past several weeks we have devoted our column almost entirely to the home buyer in an effort to make his path through the "jungle" of decision just a little bit easier. We have tried to touch on the matters which our experience has shown have raised the greatest amount of ransaction of buying a home. In these few short columns it would be impossible to make you an "expert" in the many fields covered by such a transaction; but we will feel highly successful if we have helped to steer you around some of the more prominent dangers that may lurk between you and the happy ownership of a happy home.

The secret of successfully purchasing a house basically rests in "knowing what your want." Once you're sure of this fact, and the fact of how much you can spend, you're not over all the hurdles by a long shot, but at least you're on your way. While your reliable REALTOR can assist you substantially in settling these two points, it is from here on in that he can prove his worth to you. Don't make the tragic error of trying to go it alone; and when you seek help, don't trust to incompetent guidance - it actually costs less for the best, and, in real estate, the best is the reliable REALTOR. We would appreciate the opportunity of proving this to you.

Civil Service Board Finishes Long Hearing

Road Foreman's Case Undecided

The Allegany County Civil Service Commission concluded its hearing into the discharge of Theodore R. Robertson, former county roads foreman in the Oldtown area, about 10 o'clock last night and W. Eric Gibbs, commission chairman, announced that the matter was being taken under advisement.

Mr. Gibbs explained that the commission will want to read the transcript of the two-night hearing once it is prepared by Robert B. Thomas, court stenographer. He said the commission may also want to visit the site if necessary and then will make necessary and then will make decision.

The hearing was started last hursday night. Mr. Gibbs was

The difference a single major project can make in Allegany County building activity was graphically illustrated in the report on March building permit activity of C. Lee Renaud, county planning director. During March, Mr. Renaud issued 29 building permits for construction work in the unincorporated areas of the county. The estimated cost of these 29 projects is $1,180,585.

Kennedy Will Seek Aid For Appalachians

Directs Study Of Job Possibilities

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Kennedy said Tuesday he is directing federal agencies to give greater assistance and special consideration to developing the economically depressed Appalachian states

Kennedy said at a meeting with governors and other representatives of eight Appalachian states that the area has only 5 per cent of the labor force but more than 11 per cent of the nation's unem

"Current unemployment averages 12.5 per cent, more than twice the national average," Kennedy said.

Kennedy said if Congress appropriates $500 million more for the accelerated public works program 'many additional men can be put to work in this region.

Governors at the meeting included Albertis S. Harrison Jr. of Virginia, W. W. Barron of West Virginia, J. Millard Tawes of Maryland, Bert T. Combs of Kentucky and Frank G. Clement of Tennessee

Kennedy outlined aid to the Appalachian states under programs of his administration, and a program for further assistance in the
